STUDY OVERVIEW

- ✓ Pre-recruit in 3 MJI CLT Designlab® testing facilities: New York, Atlanta and Chicago.
- ✓ N = 103
- ✓ Random Sample = 71
- ✓ Butterball Users = 66 (Includes those that "fell in" from Random Sample & Augment Sample).
- ✓ Each respondent evaluated 8 deli turkey products blind and unbranded in a supervised, self-administered computer-aided interview.
- ✓ Randomized order of product trial.
- ✓ Following the taste evaluation, respondents completed a visual evaluation of the 8 products blind and then branded.
 - ✓ 2 hours over 1 day
- ✓ Serving Size: Taste Test: 2 Slices folded on a plate
Visual Evaluation: Whole, unwrapped turkey breast labeled with product number or brand name (viewed on display tables)
- ✓ Palate cleanser: Water and Crackers
- ✓ Rest period: 5 minutes
- ✓ See appendix for detailed sequence of activities.

RESPONDENT QUALIFICATIONS

Screening criteria were set forth by Armour Swift Eckrich, Inc.:

- Females 80% and Males 20%
- Age 21-69
- Purchased and eaten turkey breast sliced to order from the Deli Counter in the past three months
- No past 6 month participation in any food related market research studies
- Industry security
- Not on a strict medical diet
- No kosher household
- Augment sample of Butterball brand turkey breast past 3 month users

CRPF04929

PTO-002470

RATING SCALE

Respondents used a 100-point scale to answer the following types of questions.
Based upon MJI's experience this scale is easily understood by respondents and is sensitive to fine differences, where differences exist.

LIKING ATTRIBUTES

- ✓ Evaluative rating that described how much a respondent liked/disliked a product overall and on a sensory attribute/level.
 - Scale for likings
(00=hate, 100=love)

SENSORY ATTRIBUTES

- ✓ Descriptive measures that provide a sensory profile.
 - Scale for sensories
(00=none/very little of an attribute,
100=a lot of an attribute)

IMAGERY ATTRIBUTES

- ✓ Descriptive measures that provide an imagery profile
(based on perceptions and past experiences).
 - Scale for imageries
(00=none/very little of an imagery attribute,
100=a lot of an imagery attribute)

- Continued -

SENSORY DIRECTIONAL ATTRIBUTES

- ✓ Evaluative measures that indicate how respondents felt about a sensory attribute.

- Scale for sensory directionals
(00=not enough of an attribute, 50=just right, 100=too much of an attribute)

INTERPRETATION OF SENSORY DIRECTIONALS

For analytical purposes, 50 points were subtracted from each directional's mean rating.
The scale interpretation of sensory directionals is as follows:

- | | | |
|------|---|--------------------------------------|
| 0 | = | just right (on target) |
| <-10 | = | not enough of an attribute (problem) |
| >+10 | = | too much of an attribute (problem) |

Based on MJI's experience, any deviation greater than ± 10 points from the "just right" score may require modification on that attribute.

MANAGEMENT SUMMARY

CRPF04932

PTO-002473

SUMMARY OF CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

ASE's portfolio of deli turkey breasts are well poised for pursuit of a segmentation strategy based on the evaluation of sliced turkey.

Two dichotomous sensory segments are evident. They are equal in size.

Moistness/Tenderness Seekers

Drier/Less Tender Seekers

- ✓ Both Healthy Choice and Butterball Oven Roasted satisfy the preferences of those consumers who appreciate a moist/lender deli turkey.
 - parity overall liking with Sara Lee
 - significantly higher overall liking vs. Boar's Head, Alpine Lace and Dietz & Watson
 - ✓ Longmont clearly satisfies the tastes of those looking for a drier/less tender turkey breast.
 - at parity on overall liking with Boar's Head & Alpine Lace
 - significantly higher overall liking vs. Sara Lee & Dietz & Watson
 - ✓ Butterball Golden Brown satisfies both segments equally though at parity to Sara Lee and Boar's Head.
- Both Butterball Golden Brown and Longmont have the added advantage of a superior liking of appearance on the basis of the whole breast.
- Driven by a darker outside and inner color, more visible grain of the meat
 - Longmont's more natural shape and appearance that is similar to homemade.

CRPF04933

PTO-002474

SUMMARY OF CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

- Continued -

Given that both segments are equal in size and ASE has products that are satisfying the tastes for each segment...

Recommendations for product reformulation are limited to improvement of the appearance of the whole breast of Healthy Choice and Butterball Oven Roasted.

- Ideally, these products may be enhanced with an outer appearance that is darker in color as well as a darker inner appearance with more visible grain. (Longmont and Butterball Golden Brown represent the sensory reference targets on these dimensions).
- This improved appearance may enhance the products' trial generating ability.

In addition, MJL recommends that ASE consider the following:

Distribution of a Longmont formulation in grocery channels.

Exploration of a distribution (multiple products in all channels) and communication strategy that can capitalize on the opportunity the segmentation of tastes presents.

PTO-002475

SUMMARY OF CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

- Continued -

In summary, MJJ's recommendations are both tactical and strategic.

Tactical recommendation= Improve whole breast appearance of Butterball Golden Brown and Healthy Choice to enhance trial.

Strategically, ASE has two options:

Option #1:

Pursue a segmentation strategy with multiple products targeted at each of the two segments.

- ✓ A Longmont product formulation to the Drier/Less Tender Seekers.
- Explore marketing under the Butterball vs. Healthy Choice brand name.
- ✓ Butterball Oven Roasted and/or Healthy Choice to the Moistness/Tenderness Seekers.
- With improved whole breast appearance (using Longmont and Butterball Golden Brown as reference targets).

CRPF04935

PTO-002476

SUMMARY OF CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

- Continued -

Option #2:

Pursue a single product strategy with Butterball Golden Brown.

- ✓ Butterball Golden Brown satisfies both segments equally though not as well as Longmont for the Drier Seekers and directionally less than Butterball Oven Roasted among Moist Seekers.
- The superior whole breast performance vs. the Healthy Choice and Butterball Oven Roasted may improve the competitive position overall via greater trial generating potential.

- The product "delivers" when sliced, so repeat should not be an issue.

How did the products perform on overall liking?

Seven of the eight products generated similar overall liking scores at a moderate level of liking.

- Longmont and Butterball Golden Brown were the top numerical scorers along with

- Boar's Head and Sara Lee
- Dietz & Watson was the weakest performer.

“REPORT CARD” OF PRODUCT PERFORMANCE (TURKEY SLICE)

- Continued -

The relatively narrow range of overall liking scores at moderate levels suggests several possibilities:

All products were perceived to be similar sensorially and thus received comparable ratings.

Products were perceived to be different sensorially but consumers were equally accepting of sensory differences.

Or,

Products were perceived to be different sensorially but these differences were appreciated by two groups of consumers at opposing ends of a sensory spectrum resulting in moderate scores on a random sample basis.

This would be a case of sensory segmentation, which will be addressed later in this report.

- Butterball Users -

Were there differences in Overall Liking scores Among Butterball Users (Past 3 Months) vs. Random sample?
The patterns of overall liking are comparable among the Augment sample of Butterball users.

This would suggest that the Butterball users may not be recognizing a sensory signature or if they are, they do not reward it with higher liking scores.

Brand usage data indicates that past 3 month Butterball users are brand switching. (See table on next page)

Implication: These two factors suggest a Butterball vulnerability given consumer acceptance of a wide variety of brands on a blind basis. (in the absence of branding or positioning)

HOW WERE THE PRODUCTS PERCEIVED SENSORIALLY? (TURKEY SLICE)

The following "perceptual maps" clearly show that the 8 turkey breasts tested spanned the sensory spectrum on three key dimensions. MJI has applied the tool of Principal Components Analysis to identify the sensory dimensions.

- The products were then "mapped" on these dimensions with the objective of understanding which products were perceived similarly vs. differently from one another.
- These dimensions are descriptive in nature and do not define a relationship to overall liking.

% of Variance explained

Implication:

The products were perceived to be quite different from one another with the above dimensions as discriminating sensory attributes.

* Wellness encompasses appearance as well as mouth feel.

CRPF04943

BACKGROUND TO PRINCIPAL COMPONENTS

- Measuring Differences In Perception -

APPROACH

- Each product was rated on many sensory attributes covering appearance, taste, and textural qualities.
- To make analysis of the data easier, it is helpful to reduce the number of individual sensory attributes to a few easy to understand, independent sensory components.

PRINCIPAL COMPONENTS:

- Principal component analysis is a statistical tool that can be used to analyze interrelationships among a large number of variables (i.e., sensory attributes) and explain these variables in terms of their common underlying sensory components (components). The approach involves finding a way of condensing the information contained in a number of sensory attributes into a smaller set of sensory dimensions/components with a minimum loss of information.
- All products are included in the principal component analysis.

INTERPRETATION OF SENSORY MAPS (TURKEY SLICE)

The following provides an example of how to read the sensory maps using the one that follows as an example.

- ✓ Butterball Oven Roasted and Healthy Choice are perceived equally on the juiciness/tender dimension with Longmont and Alpine Lace defining the opposite end of the spectrum.
- ✓ Longmont and Butterball Oven Roasted are perceived to be stronger in taste and saltier with Alpine Lace and Healthy Choice at the weaker end of the taste spectrum.

SENSORY SEGMENTATION

CRPF04953

PTO-002494

BACKGROUND TO SENSORY SEGMENTATION

Definition of Sensory Segments

- Sensory segments are groups of consumers with similar sensory (attribute intensity) preferences.

Goal

- This approach reveals opportunities for developing products for market segments.

MJL Approach

- Determine the sensory scores where liking peaks for each respondent on each attribute.
- Since sensory attributes are not necessarily independent of one another, we factor analyze the optimal sensory levels to reduce redundancy.
- Respondents with similar sensory preferences are clustered into the same sensory segment. These respondents have similar optimal levels for each sensory attribute.
- The sensory segments are defined/identified in terms of patterns of sensory characteristics the respondents like.

Learning

- The relative size of each segment.
- The characteristics of each segment.
- The liking ranges by product for each segment.

CRPF04954

PTO-002495

SENSORY SEGMENTATION (TURKEY SLICE)

Given the fact that products were perceived to be quite different sensorially but received fairly equal and moderate liking scores ... is sensory segmentation emerging?

Yes, two distinct, comparably sized segments emerged:

- Differentiated primarily by the degree of moistness and to a lesser extent, tenderness of the products.
- Relatively equal in size.

The "Moistness/Tenderness Seekers" prefer a turkey breast that is wetter in both appearance and texture.

In contrast, the "Drier/Less Tender Seekers" prefer products that are far less moist/juicy in both appearance and mouthfeel and somewhat less tender.

IMPLICATIONS OF SENSORY SEGMENTATION (TURKEY SLICE)

- Continued -

As a group, the 3 ASE products are clearly satisfying both segments of turkey consumers with one of the three straddling both segments:

Among the segment looking for a drier less tender turkey breast Longmont scores particularly well (OL= 71),
And represents ASE's best opportunity within this group.

Vs. competition:

- overall liking at parity with Boar's Head & Alpine Lace
- overall liking significantly higher than Sara Lee and Dietz & Watson

While Butterball Oven Roasted and Healthy Choice clearly satisfy the complementary segment (OL= 66 & 67 respectively).

Vs. competition:

- overall liking at parity with Sara Lee
- overall liking significantly higher than Boar's Head, Alpine Lace and Dietz & Watson

Butterball Golden Brown satisfies both segments equally as a "middle of the road" entry at parity to competition.

- None of the competitive brands tested achieve this enviable position.

(Note: Given the relatively small base size this data should be viewed directionally only).

One dramatic demographic difference is evident:

The Drier/Less Tender Seekers are almost exclusively female (91%) whereas the counterpart segment was comprised of only two-thirds females.

WHAT ARE THE SENSORY DRIVERS OF LIKING? (TURKEY SLICE)

Given the clear sensory segmentation in this category the drivers of liking must be examined for each segment.

Approach: Examine the Sensory Response Curves. Sensory Response Curves establish the relationship between sensory attributes and overall liking via Regression Analysis.

CONFIDENTIAL -
Attorneys Only

CRPF04960

PTO-002501

HOW TO INTERPRET THE SENSORY RESPONSE CURVES

Approach

- Regression analysis establishes the relationship between sensory perceptions and different levels of acceptance.
- This approach uses sensory response attributes as the independent variables and overall liking as the dependent variable.
- Sensory attribute intensity is plotted on the X-axis versus overall liking on the Y-axis.

Products are plotted on a "fitted" curve and display the effect on acceptance as sensory intensity increases.

Interpretation

The black indicators on the curve represent the locations of the products on the curve corresponding to their "X" scores.

- The directory in the upper-right corner lists the products with their respective "X" scores. The "X" score is the mean rating of the product for that particular sensory attribute.

The R-squared statistic appears in the lower-left corner of each curve. R-squared statistics can range from 0 to 1. The higher the R-squared, the better the "fit" of the curve to the products.

HOW TO INTERPRET THE SENSORY RESPONSE CURVES

INTERPRETATION OF THE CURVES

Shape Of Curve

Interpretation

Upward Sloping

As the amount of the sensory attribute increases, overall liking increases.

Downward Sloping

As the amount of the sensory attribute increases, overall liking decreases.

Inverted U-Shape

As the amount of the sensory attribute increases, overall liking increases, then peaks, then decreases.

Flat

Increasing amounts of the sensory attribute have no significant affect on overall liking.

SUMMARY OF ASE POSITION WITHIN MOISTNESS/TENDERNESS SEGMENT (TURKEY SLICE)

Butterball Oven Roasted and Healthy Choice define the peak of the overall liking curves on all sensory drivers of liking for this segment.

These two products are well liked as evidenced by high overall liking scores of 66 and 67 respectively.
They outperform two key competitors: Boar's Head and Alpine Lace and are at parity to Sara Lee.

Conclusion:

Based only on the evaluation of individual turkey slices, no product improvement would be indicated for these ASE brands given their performance on a pure product basis. (In absence of branding or positioning)

WHAT SENSORY ADVANTAGES WERE PERCEIVED FOR WELL-LIKED ASE PRODUCTS VS. BOAR'S HEAD AND SARA LEE?

- Among Moistness/Tenderness Seekers -

On the basis of the turkey slice evaluation...

Both Healthy Choice and Butterball Oven Roasted have sensory advantages that may be leveragable vs. competition in marketing communication. Both were perceived to be far juicier/wetter and more tender than both key competitors.

Also, fresher, more natural tasting vs. Boar's Head.

SUMMARY OF ASE POSITION WITHIN DRIER/LESS TENDER SEGMENT (TURKEY SLICE)

MJI recommends that ASE make no changes to their Longmont product given its high overall liking score of 71 among this segment; an excellent score.

On a pure product basis, in the absence of branding, Longmont:

- Achieves parity on overall liking with Alpine Lace and Boar's Head
- Outperforms Sara Lee and Dietz & Watson

Longmont's performance among this segment may represent an opportunity for ASE to market this brand in grocery deli channels.

BLIND VISUAL APPEAL OF THE WHOLE BREAST

On the basis of an unbranded whole breast evaluation...

Longmont is clearly regarded as the best looking of the tested products. (Visual appeal cuts across the random sample, Butterball users and both sensory segments.)

Outperforming Boar's Head and all other competitors.

Butterball Golden Brown is also well liked though to a lesser extent.

Scoring at parity to Boar's Head and outperforming all others.

Butterball Oven Roasted and Healthy Choice were far and away the least visually appealing turkeys suggesting a vulnerability vs. competitive brands and a potential barrier to trial.

DRIVERS OF LIKING FOR WHOLE TURKEY BREAST

What sensory characteristics are Driving Liking of Appearance for the whole breast?

- Darker outer color
- Darker inner color
- More visual grain of meat

Longmont and Butterball Golden Brown define the “optimal” appearance with Healthy Choice and Butterball Oven Roasted at the opposite extreme on all these characteristics.

Two imagery attributes are also clearly driving overall liking of appearance for Longmont:

- Natural looking shape
- Appearance similar to homemade

Longmont defines the “optimal” appearance with Healthy Choice and Butterball Oven Roasted at the opposite extreme on both characteristics.

These patterns are consistent across both sensory segments.

Implication:

Given that Healthy Choice and Butterball Oven Roasted are well liked on appearance, taste and texture when evaluated as a slice, opportunity exists to improve the appearance as a whole breast.

- Given that the whole breast appearance influences the purchase decision at the deli counter, improvement should enhance trial.

IMPACT OF BRANDING

CONFIDENTIAL -

CRPF04999

WHAT IS THE IMPACT OF BRANDING ON OVERALL LIKING OF THE WHOLE TURKEY BREAST?

Approach

Each of the products tested for visual appeal unbranded were also tested branded.

Comparing the unbranded vs. branded performance aids in determining the impact the brand name has on visual appeal.

- This analysis has been done on the random sample and among Butterball users.

THE IMPACT OF BRANDING

- Among The Random Sample-

The Boar's Head brand name had a substantial positive impact on consumer liking of appearance of the whole turkey breast.

- On an unbranded basis, Boar's Head Oven Gold was rated significantly lower than Longmont.
 - ◆ When branded, overall visual appeal increases 12 points (56-68) bringing it to parity with Longmont.
- The Boar's Head name enhances imagery characteristics of a more natural and homemade appearance.

The positive impact of the Butterball name was limited to the Butterball Oven Roasted enhancing liking of appearance (+15pts.) though it remains at far lower levels than other brands.

The Healthy Choice brand name had no impact , which is not surprising given that it is a niche product.

Interestingly, if you're a good product, an unknown brand name does not appear to have a negative impact, as evidenced by the Longmont scores.

SEQUENCE OF ACTIVITIES

Respondents were pre-recruited via telephone to MJL's DesignLab® facilities. Upon arrival for the study they were rescreened to ensure that they met the study qualifications.

Respondents were seated in groups of 17 at individual computer workstations.

- Respondents participated in a cracker practice exercise as a group. This exercise along with the moderator guidance served to familiarize the respondents with the types of questions being asked and the rating scales.

Taste Evaluation - Blind

- Table interviewers served the respondents the products indicated on their computer screen.
(Pre-programmed in advance according to a rotation schematic)

Respondents received two slices of folded deli turkey breast on a labeled 9 inch plate. The slicer was set to 3/32".

The moderator took the respondents through the first few questions together as a group.

Respondents evaluated 8 out of 8 products in a systematically rotated sequential monadic format.

Prior to tasting each product, respondents rated the product on appearance and aroma attributes.

Respondents were then instructed to take 2 to 3 bites of the turkey slices using a knife and fork.

After tasting each product, respondents evaluated the turkey on the following measures:

- ✓ Overall Liking
- ✓ Taste/Flavor
- ✓ Texture
- ✓ Imagery

Respondents waited a minimum of 5 minutes between product evaluations to allow their mouths to return to a normal state of sensory acuity.

- Respondents cleansed their palate with a bite of cracker and a sip of water between product evaluations.

After completing the last taste evaluation, respondents completed the classification questionnaire.

- continued -

Visual Evaluation - Blind

At the end of the taste evaluation, respondents were divided into groups of 4 - 5.

The first group of respondents was directed to the tables with 8 whole chunks of deli turkey breast labeled with the appropriate product number. Each breast was presented unwrapped with an open face towards respondents.

- The order of the turkey breasts was randomized and was reordered in between each group of respondents to eliminate order bias.

Respondents were handed a booklet of questionnaires: one for each product with a overall liking ranking question at the end. The questionnaires were labeled with the product numbers and were in the order of the product rotation.

- Respondents evaluated each turkey breast on inner and outer appearance attributes.

Once all products were evaluated, respondents completed the ranking question: respondents were asked to rank the turkey breasts in order of liking from product liked most to product liked least.

- As each group completed the blind visual evaluation they were guided through a second visual evaluation which was branded.

Visual Evaluation - Branded

- After completing the visual blind phase of the study, respondents remained in their groups and were guided into another room to view all 8 chunks of deli turkey breasts branded.
- As with the blind phase, the order of the turkey breasts was randomized and was reordered in between each group of respondents to eliminate order bias.

Respondents were handed another booklet of questionnaires: one for each product with a overall liking ranking question at the end. The questionnaires were labeled with the brand name and were in the order of the product rotation.

Respondents evaluated each turkey breast on inner and outer appearance attributes.

Once all products were evaluated, respondents completed the ranking question: respondents were asked to rank the turkey breasts in order of liking from product liked most to product liked least.

As each group completed the branded visual evaluation they were thanked, paid and dismissed and second group began the branded evaluation.

“REPORT CARD” OF PRODUCT PERFORMANCE (TURKEY SLICE)

- By Market -

Given the small base sizes it is difficult to draw conclusions regarding the response patterns between liking scores across markets.

Is it likely that a particular market evaluated sub-par product?

Analysis of the pattern in liking would suggest NO. Had a particular product been “off” or “bad” we would have expected to see some of the remaining products significantly up-rated which is not reflected in these scores.
